AS PER FSSAI vs AYUSH vs DRUG LICENSE GUIDELINES

In India, clear and guideline-based regulations have been established by the Food Safety and Standards Authority of India (FSSAI, 2008) for food supplements, nutraceuticals and health products, to ensure that people receive safe, high-quality products with proper information. Along with this, the Indian Council of Medical Research (ICMR) and the National Institute of Nutrition (NIN) in their 2020 nutrition guidelines have emphasized balanced nutrition, safe dietary practices and the responsible use of food supplements. According to these regulations, no food supplement, herbal product, juice, powder, tablet, capsule or other nutraceutical product can claim to cure, prevent or completely eliminate any disease. Similarly, misleading, guarantee-based or scientifically unproven claims are considered inappropriate.

The Following Types of Claims Should Be Avoided: Any Kind Of Guarantee | Miracle Cure | Cures Disease | Controls Disease | Eliminates Disease From The Root | Gives Instant Results | Completely Removes Illness | Doctor/institute Certified (without Proof) | Clinically Proven/tested (without Scientific Data) | Protects From All Diseases | Use As A Replacement For Medicine | Completely Removes Weakness | 100% Result Guarantee |

Examples of Safe & Responsible Claims: Helps Support Immunity | Useful For General Wellness | Helps Maintain Energy Levels | Supports Digestive Health | Nutritional Support Formula | Enriched With Natural Ingredients | Helps Support A Healthy Lifestyle | Useful For Overall Wellness |

“THE RIGHT SUPPLEMENT IS THE MADE ACCORDING TO REGULATIONS
,AND USED WITH PROPER KNOWLEDGE AND RESPONSIBILITY.”

Why Does Every Person Get Different Results?

“If you give the same product to 10 different people, you will get 10 different results... Why?”

“Even after eating the same food, one person gains weight while another remains slim... then how can the same supplement affect everyone equally?”

Because every person:

- Is born with a different body structure (DNA)
- Follows a different lifestyle
- Eats different types of food
- Has a different health condition

Basic Body Constitution (According to Ayurveda)

According to Ayurveda, our body is based on three major elements — Vata, Pitta and Kapha, known as the “Tridosha.” If these three remain balanced, a person can live a healthy and disease-free life. But when they become imbalanced, many types of health problems may arise. According to Ayurveda, imbalance of Vata may lead to around 80 types of disorders, Pitta may cause around 40–50 types of disorders, and Kapha may lead to around 28 types of disorders. When all three doshas become disturbed, several serious health problems can develop in the body.
